Sea Cadet Medal of Excellence Speech from CPO2 Pascal Gravelle

April 8, 2014

I’m honored by this Navy League Cadet Medal of Excellence which you’ve awarded me; and I’m extremely privileged to be here to acknowledge those to whom I owe my success.

It’s very impressive to know how many people and organizations work to achieve one common goal; the training of Canada’s youth in excellence and leadership, which prepares us to be next leaders of this great Nation.

Therefore I wish to thank several parties to whom I hold boundless gratitude.

Thank you Lt.-Col. MacMillan and the Department of National Defense. Thank you National President of the Navy League, Mrs. Louise Mercier. Thank you President of the Navy League, Mr.
Gordon King. Thank you all Navy league branch members, Navy League cadet officers, and CIC Officers. Also, thanks to my dedicated and hardworking corps officers for teaching and guiding me through the vast amount of knowledge which this cadet program has to offer.

And finally thank you to my family for your full support and commitment in ensuring my participation in this awesome organization.

I thank you all for the standard of excellence you uphold, and all the support and opportunity that you have presented me and many Canadian youth.

Without all the support I’ve received throughout my cadet career, the opportunities which have been afforded to me would be non-existent. The chance for me to grow into the confident young man I am now would have passed me by.

The Cadet program has taught me so much as I’ve grown up in it.

One of the most important lessons I’ve learned are the life lessons that have helped prepare me for my future. Much of this experience has been the constant push for better leadership in myself and those around me.

I’ve recently become the Coxswain of a one year old Royal Canadian Sea cadet Corps # 357 Hero. I am learning not only how to manage people, but also, how to inspire and influence the cadets under my responsibility.

This is a challenging job with many diverse aspects, but with the support of my staff, I am learning a lot about different ways to strive for this excellence as a corps and as a team.

This is my promise to you, I will strive to exemplify and uphold the standard of excellence that this award acknowledges throughout my life as a future leader of this Nation.

HMCS OJIBWA

Adventure like you’ve never experienced it before
Are you looking for an adventure with mystery and intrigue? Add a burst of pride about our Canadian forces and a unique educational setting and that just about skims the surface of what our Oberon Class Cold War Submarine HMCS Ojibwa has to offer cadets and all our visitors. It’s big, it’s real and it’s ready for you to explore from how to stern. It is quite simply the most unique and exciting experience around.

HMCS Ojibwa was commissioned into the Royal Canadian Navy in 1965 in response to grow apprehension about the Cold War and served until 1998. Although glorified in movies, until now little has been told about the real activities of the submarine service. They left harbour in the dark of night and returned the same way, their crews coming and going dressed as regular dock workers to avoid detection by Soviet Spies. Our tours take you inside this secret world of Cold War submariners. Jim “Lucky” Gordon, a sonar man, put it this way. “During my time in OJIBWA we might have to slip into hostile harbours and remain undetected while gathering audio and visual intelligence on military facilities, warships and submarines. The atmosphere was electric, absolute silence throughout the submarine. We would move stealthily under Soviet warships close enough to photograph their hulls…”

For a full-day adventure, our Land, Sea and Air Program goes beyond the Cold War to take cadets deep into the world of the three services during World War II. First visit to HMCS Ojibwa to learn about the Battle of the Atlantic and the ultimate strategies that led to Allied victory at sea. Next visit the Canadian Harvard Aircraft Association for a trip through the air war and the amazing Harvard aircraft that formed the backbone of the Allied Air Training Fleet. Finally it is on to the Bill Findlay Outdoor Trench Warfare and Living History Site to participate in the re-enactment of a WWII battle. It is a day that you will remember forever!

Uncommon Heroes: A Year in Review
By Danika Gravelle    June 1, 2014

The Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Annual Review is not just about the cadets showcasing their accomplishments of the year,

On May 28, 2014, RCSCC Hero’s Commanding Officer, Lt(N) Debra Goode, was joined by LCdr John Metcalf, the Reviewing Officer, and Navy League President of Ontario, Gord King, for this momentous occasion.

Hero was also joined by two other special guests; RCSCC Manitoulin was represented by two officers and six cadets, while RCSCC Admiral Mountbatten of Sudbury brought their award winning Brass and Drum band; both corps marched on parade with RCSCC Hero.

The evening began with the Ship’s Company falling in, and a rousing performance of O Canada by Mt. Batten. The Reviewing Party came aboard and was given the General Salute. At this time, the dignitaries present performed an Inspection of the Ship’s company where each of the cadets was evaluated on their dress and deportment. Upon its completion, the Ship’s Company honored the Reviewing Party with the customary March Past.

Then came the fun part of the program; the static displays. There were five different events, showcasing what the cadets had participated in over the course of the year; sailing, orienteering, nautical flags, heaving line and range. ASLt(N) Darryl Nadeau, the corps emcee, explained to the Reviewing Party and attendees what the events were and how well the cadets performed at those local and Provincial events.

The Year in Review: RCSCC Hero had one cadet place first at the Regional Sailing Regatta in Kingston and sixth at the National level. For the local Orienteering event, RCSCC Hero had cadets on the winning male team, junior male winner, junior female winner and second place intermediate male. All three cadets advanced to the Provincial competition where the males won first for their composite team and a second place finish for junior males.

At the Sudbury Zone Marksmanship competition, the range team came in second place over all with four of their junior marksmen performing in the top six. At the Northern Ontario Band and Drill competition, RCSCC Hero won Best Dressed Corps and Best Drill Without Arms Commander. Both Drill With Arms and Drill Without Arms performed their routine for the Reviewing Party and attendees. RCSCC Admiral Mountbatten was also given the opportunity to perform their Freestyle Band routine that won them third place at the Regional Band and Drill Competition several weeks ago. LCdr Metcalf and the Reviewing Party were quite impressed at the high level of excellence all of the cadets performed.

Next was the highly anticipated Awards Ceremony. All year, cadets are evaluated on many different levels of discipline, deportment and naval knowledge. There are many opportunities to excel and have their name emblazoned upon a trophy for all time.

RCSCC Hero was also awarded earlier this year with the Navy League Cadet Medal of Excellence and Top Cadet in all of Ontario to CPO2 Pascal Gravelle. The corps also won the Navy League Service Award for establishing corps excellence and retaining a high number of cadets in its first year.

The evening was wrapped up with LCdr Metcalf giving a rousing speech to these Uncommon Heroes. He acknowledged his astonishment at what RCSCC Hero has accomplished as a corps their first year and can hardly wait to see how they improve upon what has proven to be an outstanding and exceptional year. NL President Gordon King also gave an emotional speech, praising RCSCC Hero for accomplishing in their first year what most established corps have never achieved. He, too, looks forward to watching how RCSCC Hero will continue to strive for excellence in the coming years.

Commanding Officer Lt(N) Debra Goode wrapped up the evening by acknowledging her Officer Cadre’ for their tireless dedication and hard work throughout the year. Navy League President: Denise St. Pierre. NL Vice-President: Ray Constantineau.

RCSCC Hero wants to thank the parents and the Espanola Community at large for their support in establishing such a dynamic corps. RCSCC Hero looks forward to a long and prosperous future in serving the community with Canada’s best kept secret for youth programs: The Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps. www.espanolaseacadets.com.

The goal is to provide local Seamanship sponsored by the NL Kemptville to RCSCC Defiant. The historic Rideau canal system runs through the town of Kemptville and is the ideal calm waterway for cadet power boat training.

Canada’s First Naval Casualties
By William Wilson, VP Maritime Affairs

One Hundred years ago, the first graduates of the Royal Canadian Naval Academy were enjoying the end of their formal training. They now awaited postings to the ships of the RCN or exchange duty with the Royal Navy. Far away in the Balkans the heir to the Austro-Hungarian Empire was cut down by a Bosnian assassin and the train of events that would lead to the Great War was lit.

At the end of July as Europe mobilized the Royal Navy re-commissioned many older ships for service on foreign stations where the latest ships were not considered necessary. One such station was the Western South Atlantic where a cruiser squadron was created under Rear Admiral Christopher Cradock consisting of two armoured cruisers; HMS Good Hope and Monmouth with the light cruiser HMS Glasgow and an ancient battleship HMS Canopus. The personnel of Cradock’s squadron were made up of reservists recalled from civilian life and who had not trained together. He was also short of trained officers. During a stop in Halifax, he contacted his old friend Vice Admiral Kingsmill, who had earlier retired from the Royal Navy and was now head of the RCN, and requested the attachment of some Midshipmen from the recent graduating class of the RCNA. Four Midshipmen, who were top of the class, were assigned. They were Midshipmen Cann, Hathaway, Palmer and Silver.

In the mean time the German East Asia Squadron under Vice Admiral Maximillian Graf von Spee sailed from its base at Tsingtao in China so as not to be trapped by the navy of Great Britain’s ally Japan. The Royal Australian Navy to the south was also superior to his force. The German squadron sailed the Pacific taking merchant prizes and threatening British island colonies. They even caused a panic in British Columbia where it was feared they would attack. The German ships were the armoured cruisers SMS Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, and the light cruisers Emden and Nurnberg. They had been together since 1911 and Vice Admiral von Spee, a gunnery specialist, had trained them hard.

By the end of October the Germans had reached the coast of Chile and von Spee had decided to make a break for home. The British Admiralty was aware that he was in the area but did not realize that he had his whole force with two additional cruisers with him. Admiral Cradock had sailed around Cape Horn to intercept. On the evening of October 30th the two forces met off Cape Coronel, Chile. Cradock was clearly outclassed but chose to engage lest he be charged with failing to engage the enemy. He started the battle with the tactical advantage of being up sun, but after sunset his ships were silhouetted against the afterglow.

Both British armoured cruisers were sunk. HMS Good Hope was sunk with all hands including the four Canadians. When the news got back to Britain there was outrage. This was the first British naval defeat in over on hundred years. Two battle cruisers HMS Invincible and Inflexible were sent to the Falkland Islands and a new cruiser squadron was created consisting of HMS Kent, Cornwall and Carnarvon and was also dispatched there. By chance the British Fleet arrived on December 7th 1914, one day before the arrival of the Germans. The next morning, when the Germans arrived, von Spee realized that this time he was outclassed and he tried to flee. However, The British ships were faster and it was the height of the southern summer so they had all day to hunt down and sink the German squadron. The result was sinking of all but one of the German cruisers.
